Knowing how your credit score is calculated is the best way not only to increase your score but maintain it.

HOW YOUR SCORE IS CALCULATED

6 Ways to Increase Your Score

Pay Your Bills on Time

It often surprises people how much a late payment affects your credit score. Remember 35% of your score is your payment history.

Pay Down your credit cards to 10%

It is good practice to use no more than 30% of your credit card limit for good utilization and 10% for excellent utilization.

Do a good faith late payment removal

Call the company and ask for a good faith removal for a late month. Often, they will remove it without a hassle.

6 Ways to Increase Your Score

Ask For a Credit Increase

This will help with your credit utilization percentage, which is 30% of your score. Do this every six months or once a year.

Don't Close Any Accounts.

You may want to close a credit card account you don't use or have paid off, but it is better to keep it open for credit length history, which is 15% of your score.

Pay Your Bills Early

It may sound redundant. However, depending on your credit profile, missing one payment can drop your score up to 100 points. Paying your bills early ensures this doesn't happen.

Collections, Bankruptcy, Repossessions, Student Loans, Charge Offs & More

When it comes to removing collections items from your credit profile it depends on the item. Mistakes and late payments can be done on your own. However, anything else is better left to credit restoration companies. You may be able to remove the items yourself, but the removal oftentimes is not permanent.
